Comments: I find it hard to believe we can't get some support from the states that this stuff will have to be hauled through. You would think that they would be as worried as we are about the accident risk of hauling this stuff through their states, too. I would think it would be as dangerous then as after it gets here, if not more. Has this been shown to the states it has to be transported through? Are we looking for all the support we can get from outside this state? One state out of 50 with no support from others is not going to have as good a chance!
